

Abstract

A method for sharing expenditure of distribution system, designed to resolve the internal dilemma of enterprises being unable to accurately calculate and utilize system resources. Through the statistical system's dynamic monitoring conducted separately on the various departments with regards to the situation of their use of resources, as well as demanding the sharing of the system's maintenance expenditures, a reduction in the cost of the enterprise's system maintenance is facilitated.